Visa's CEO, Ryan McInerney, presented today at our TMC conference in Boston. Tone was positive and topics discussed included the Visa-as-a-Service strategy, new products, consumer payments TAM, and Visa's increasingly diversified growth drivers. Key takeaways below:

- Visa-as-a-Service. A strategy introduced at its Investor Day earlier this year, Visa-as-a-Service involves unbundling Visa's product set to support more customers in more ways across its service stack. On top of the VisaNet infrastructure layer, Visa is becoming more modular which will unlock more opportunities to work with more parties, including would-be competitors like A2A rails or potentially disruptive tech platforms, for example. We like the strategy and look forward to tracking its progress, expecting it to manifest by sustaining VAS growth (see below) as more services are unbundled and consumed.
- Product Updates. Agentic commerce was a big focus at Visa's product drop a few weeks ago where Visa unveiled Visa Intelligent Commerce. McInerney discussed how Visa is in a good position to support the evolution of these emerging AI-powered payment modalities given its infrastructure, rule sets and scale. Establishing trust between unknown counter parties has long been central to Visa's business model and we think that becomes increasingly important as agents enter the flow of commerce. Tokenization is a critical technology that powers Visa's vision for agentic commerce, as it has for modern ecommerce and wallet-based payments. McInerney described how Visa had 1B tokens in 2020 vs. just under 14B today; last quarter alone Visa added 1B tokens. The substantial adoption is led by ecosystem benefits including ~5% higher authorization rates and 30%+ lower fraud (as we discuss in our Tokenization Deep Dive). Visa Direct now has 11B endpoints (including both Visa cards and other networks/accounts), doing 10B transactions last year at per-transaction economics that are similar to its core debit business.
- Core Consumer Payments. Visa continues to see a stable macro – although sentiment is under pressure, spend trends remain healthy. McInerney was upbeat around the global TAM within core consumer payments ($23T volume opportunity), highlighting how product innovations like Visa Accept (helps expand acceptance endpoints in emerging markets) and growth of credentials builds the network to support growth above consumer spending. Management said even in markets where cash is largely non-existent (Australia, Canada, Denmark, etc.), Visa is sustaining growth MSD ppts above addressable

- Diversity of Growth. Roughly a third of Visa's revenue today is generated from VAS (~$9B rev last year, growing 20%+) and CMS. Management reiterated their expectation for this revenue to expand to half of Visa over time, as the company is increasingly diversifying into new revenue types (as well as more geographies). VAS, at about a quarter of overall Visa revenue, has a long runway for growth having penetrated only a L-MSD % of its TAM today.

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period. J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
